Democratic Campaign Policy in West Virginia.

The Regiser's attempt to force an "evasive" campaign policy on the West Virginia Democracy is not received kindly by some of the brethren. Any other year but a presidential year might be a good time to obscure national issues, they think, but they do not think it is honest to pursue such a course at the present time. Nor do the Republicans have any notion of per-mitting the Democratic leaders to avoid a discussion of national questions.

The Register, realizing that its party is hopelessly divided on the silver question and other national issues, knows that the only hope of harmony in West Virginia is to obscure these matters and make the fight wholly for the state officers. The people will not be so eas-

Here is a pitiful plea for its brand of party harmony made by the Register the other day:

It is not the silver question, nor any other question of national importance, that is of the most vital interest to the people senerally of West Virginia, but whether our state government shall be preserved to the people and for the uses of the people. Other issues we may settle in their proper places, but on this we must stand united.

Some of the Texture Texture

Some of the Democratic papers have taken this paragraph up and indulged in some spicy and discouraging com-ments thereon. As, for instance, the St. Mary's Oracle, which, in its frankly honest Democratic-free-silver way, says:

We commend the above editorial to our readers for what it is worth. There are some good things in it, and some that are not so good. If the Register thinks that it can "hoodoo" the voters of the Democratic party into supporting a "gold bug" for a national position, while it gives the silver man some little state offices where his views, financially, won't amount to a row of pins, why, we think the silver man some little state offices where his views, financially, won't amount to a row of pins, why, we think of a row in the same that it is a row of pins, why, we think of the same in the same that it is a row of pins, who, we think of the same will be because the pencephe have declared their judgment in convention on national issues as well as state matters, and that the minority has gracefully yielded to the majority. A convention of the Kentucky kind won't do, where the faction dominating the convention was able to only elect aix members of the legislature out of fixty. Give the Democratis of the state at will come out of the overy fun but, hone of the Kentucky method in ours, please.

This is refreshing, but it is not filled

This is refreshing, but it is not filled with encouragement to the Register. It shows that some Democrats have the honesty and the courage of their con-victions, even though their convictions may be wrong.

In view of this and other Democratic comments on the Register's proposition, it is evident that to secure har-mony in the matter of running a national campaign with a disregard of the na-tional questions that vitally affect the people the Register will first have to nuzzle a very large and respectable element of the party. Public School Bible Readings.

Twenty-two years ago Bible-reading in the public schools of Chicago were abandoned. There was so much oppo sition to the readings and so many shades of opinion to concilitate that it was thought best to remove entirely the of contention.

Still there has been a desire to give to public school pupils the daily benefit of the wise precepts of holy writ, and in the hope of reaching a conclusion that the nope of reaching a conclusion that would give general satisfaction a com-mittee of clergymen and laymen, Roman Catholics, Protestanta and Jews set out to prepare a book that Jews set out to prepare a book that would meet the requirements. The re-sult is a book of 200 pages called "Read-ings from the Bible," and this is to be offered to the heard of education.

The work seems to have been done with excellent judgment and skill, judging from several columns of extracts given by the Tribune. The Psalms and Proverbs, as was to be expected, are largely drawn on. It is distinctly a child's book.

There is a place for just such a work, Something of he kind has long been ed, and if the Chicago production be all that it is thought to be, the world will be the debtor to the thought and enterprise of the scholars of that city, The English-speaking world will want it, and the scheme will as certainly find

The Passing Silver Craze,

The house of representatives, fresh from the people and soon to be over-

will be a work of increased hopeless

The country understands the question better than it did when it seemed on the verge of going free-silver-mad. cannot be deceived by false reasoning, cannot be inflamed by the appeal of the demagogue or of his principal the silver mine owner. The country believes in good dollars of gold, silver and paper, each with a purchasing power of a hun dred cents. It wants no clipped cur-rency of any kind.

The silver delusion is fast vanishing. It shows big in the senate because that body is further removed from the people and because such a rotten borough as Nevada— a state without a population-has as many votes as New York. Nevada has one representative in the house. New York has thirty-four. In time the people will get round to the senate—probably the senate will get in line with the people sooner.

At present the only force the free silver movement has is to obstruct, and that by reason of its senate strength. It has no power to do any affirmative thing. For this the country has great reason to be grateful.

If Nansen has carved his name on the If Nansen has carved as name of the north pole it will be unnecessary for anybody else to go up there. All the glory of it has departed. This, how-ever, will not prevent the commercial enterprise from affixing to the pole "use Smith's Kidney Cure," or something equally stimulating.

Mr. Morgan or the People?

The treasury department made the mistake of not requiring an earnest of good faith to accompany each bid for the new bonds. If there had been a deposit of a small percentage of each bid, bidders would have been more careful to know that they had their arrange-ments made to close in case their bids were accepted. Some went ahead in the bidding who cannot now step up to the cantain's office.

Another difficulty was added by the decision of the department that awards cannot be assigned. The original bid-der must come forward with the money or drop out. What possible difference can it make to the treasury whether the bonds bid for by Brown are taken by him or Smith, his assignee? In any case the government sells a given face value of bonds for an agreed sum of

But it seems that Mr. Morgan has made another of his visits to Washington, and by reason of the subsequent rulings he was to get about $10,000,000 more of the bonds. We say he was to get them, for another of the original bidders has come forward with an offer which means a difference of $100,000 in favor of the government,

The question is whether the people or Mr. Morgan shall make this $100,000. Mr. Morgan has done very well in his transactions with the government. Isn't it about time to let him drop into the great mass of his countrymen and take his share of the general gain of a transaction in the public interest? Doubtless Mr. Morgan is a highly de-serving man, but there are others.

Secretary Carlisle should be glad when he gets through with the bond transaction. At every step of it he gets in trouble. Is Mr. Cleveland pulling the strings?

It seems easier to find a new comet than a big Democrat willing to run for the presidency this year. What a world of change this is.

HOKE WENT A SKATING.

The Secretary of the Interior Thought the Trick was Inherited.

ing. Inquiries developed the fact that the quake was purely local in its character.

There is a big skating rink in Washington, recently opened, and patronized largely by fashiomable people. Mr. Cleveland's secretary of the interior, Hoke Smith, of Georgia, has been pining for a good skate for three weeks. He can't go duck hunting. He was born in North Carolina, where they only see ice in mixed drinks ordered by northerners, but his father was born in New Hampshire, and had fired Hoke's youthful imagination with tales of his prowess on acc. Now Mr. Smith believed that ability to skate is inherited and not acquired. So this evening he not only ventured forth to skate but invited a lot of pwee girl cousins to see him cut curiyeues and write their names in the lee.

The attendarts strapped the skates on Scoretary Smith, and he astood up, Somehow it didn't seem just right, but with all those Georgia girls looking at him and beginning to riggie there was only one thing to do and that was to skate. He struck out, One skate started for Georgia and the other for Canada. Two attendants pulled them together. Then both skates left for Chicago and took Secretary Smith's feet with them, while the rest of the Interior department clung to the Discrict of Columbia. He fell like a landside and the Georgia cousins stricked in chorus. Pour assistants helped him up, in the course of the next helf hour Secretary Smith had hit the ice with 215 pounds of eminent legal taland no less than six times and had damaged the rink to an amount not yet estimacted.

RIVER IMPROVEMENT.

The Fairmont Delegation Pleased with Its Reception at Washington. Fairmont Index: The delegation from the Fairmont Chamber of Com-Fairmont Index: The delegation from the Fairmont Chamber of Commerce, which went before the committee on rivers and fiarbors, in Washington, last Tuesday, to enlist the efforts of that committee in the early improvement of the Monongahela river, has every reason to feel encouraged at the reception they were accorded individually and as a delegation, and at the very happy impression their presence and arguments seemed to make upon the committee. Mr. Dayton waseances in his efforts to secure the full-est consideration for the views of the delegation before the committee, and his treatment of his committee, and marked by the utmost kindness and courtesy. His introduction of the delegation to the committee was a forcible argument in favor of the improvement they demanded. He was ably seconded by Senators Faulkner and Elkins, both of whom made strong speeches in beargument in tayor of the improvement they demanded. He was ably seconded by Senators Faulkner and Elkins, both of whom made strong speeches in behalf of the enterprise. A full account will be found elsewhere of the speeches, etc. At the conclusion of Senator Elkins' speech he was heartily applauded by members of the committee, which was accepted as a happy augury for the enterprise. Indeed it was the impression of all who were present that it is no longer a question of apropriations for the work, but simply a question as to how it will be taken up and fluikned. Both Senators Elkins and Faulkner impressed upon the committee the desirability and wisdom of taking up all the locks and dams at the same time, and pushing them to completion under a continuous contract system. We believe their suggestions will have much weight in forming the action of the committee, of course the recommendations of the committee practically settle the question in both the house and senate. We have some warm friends at court, at least, and if we fall it will not be because our congressmen do not feel a warm interest in the subject. But we are of the opinion that the project will not fail. The completion of this enterprise would be such a boon to this section as can scarcely be estimated, and after the arguments all the members of the committee seemed to be in accord with this idea of the subject.

The Wheeling Register is responsible for the following:
Mr. Alfred Jahn, a large importer of china and glassware, of Philadelphia, was at the Windsor Hotel last evening. "All of the ornamental glass and china-ware used in this country is imported." said Mr. Jahn to the Register. "This is simply because the United States has not as yet the force of skilled workmen encessary to turn out the work which is performed in the countries of Europe in these lines."
And that old chestnut, uttered within a square or two of the Warwick China Company and the Wheeling Pottery Company, noted all over this country for their unexcelled keramic products, was left unchallenged by the Register. No finer ornamental glass has ever been made in the world than was for many years continually turned out by Hobbs, Brockunier & Co., of Wheeling; by the Central Glass Company, when it operated the Brilliant works under that master metal worker. August Weyer, or Mr. Harry Northwood at Martin's Ferry, and now at Ellwood City, Pa., not to mention the splendid ornamental glassware made by the Eagle Glass Company, Gillinder & Sons, and half a dozen others, who could be readily named. It would be of general interest to know where Mr. Alfred Jahn, of Philadelphia, has been putting in his spare time all, his life. Will not our friends, the Messrs. Gillinder, of Philadelphia, kindly invite their fellow cittzen, Mr. Jahn, to cail at their office and show him their works and ornamental glassware?"

A Leading Trade Journal Thinks it Onghi to be Successful.

The future of the Ohio Valley China Works is undetermined. It has closed down, and it is understood that Mr. Anton Reymann, the well known brewer, who is the owner, is willing to sell or lease the plant, says China, Glass and Lampa. There are eight kilns and the pottery is one of the best in the United States. They have been making very fine goods in bric-a-brac, fancy goods and dinner ware, and these goods compare favorably with the finest in the world. For such high grade goods the plant is too large, and only a portion of it has been in operation the past year or so. Last year's business was fair. The unsold stock is being closed out. It is now a demonstrated fact that fine china, like the French, known as "True Hard Porcelain" can be successfully made in this country, in such articles as fancy useful wares and fine dinner services, and that its manufacture together with a line of more common goods can be successfully and profitably carried on here. The Ohio Valley ought not to remain ide long. The plant, if run to its full capacity, would employ a large number of people.

John and Frank Paulding, of this city, have been advised that they are among the heirs to a large fortune left by the French family of Royer. There are also a large number of heirs living in Ohio, Maryland, Illinois and Virginia and the amount of the American fortune is estimated to be $60,000,000. Besides the American heirs there are heirs living in France, who are now engaged in establishing their right to property valued at $120,000,000. The wealthy Marquis Royer was one of the noblemen in France who became involved in political troubles and was obliged to flee to America, whither he came with his three sons, Jean, Count of Royer, ardelle-and Marquis Jacques Royer, who was the youngest. Ardelle soon died. Jean, the count of Royer, married an American heiress. The two brothers purchased harge tracta of land in Missouri, Maryland, Pennsylvania and Virginia. In 1788 Jacques Royer, the younger brother, died in St. Louis, leaving a large estate in that city, in King's county, N. Y., and in Illinois, hesides his share of the estate in Paris, Jacques Royer was never married and died without a will. actually entitled, and not as it appears in the census reports.

The vote in the corporate limits as to whether the extension should be made sfood as follows: 189 for it, 24 against; on the south side the result was 89 in favor of coming in to the town proper and 8 against.

There is a population here of at least 5,000, and yet, owing to the very small corportain limits, the census only gives about 1,500. Other towns and suburbs will be taken in as fast as possible, until the population is grouped in one corporation.
